4.3.5 In-Person and Remote Access to Library Resources and Library Usage Programmes Organised for Teachers and Students

Spoorthi Ayurveda Medical College & Dr. S. V. Savadi Ayurveda Hospital, Gangavathi – 583227, Karnataka, functioning under Atreya Ayurveda Pratisthana®, has a well-established Central Library with adequate physical and digital learning resources to support academic excellence, competency-based education, research and continuous professional development.

During the preceding academic year, the institution organised various library orientation, awareness and hands-on training programmes for teaching faculty and students to promote effective utilisation of library resources and digital learning facilities.

1. In-Person Access to Library Resources

The Central Library provides in-person access to textbooks, reference volumes, journals, classical Ayurvedic literature and other academic resources. The library has 8,000 textbooks, 168 reference volumes and 36 journals, supporting teaching, learning and research activities.

Students and faculty members utilise the library for academic reading, reference consultation, preparation of assignments, seminars, research activities and clinical knowledge enhancement.

The library is supported by an Integrated Library Management System (ILMS) for systematic management of library resources and circulation services.

2. Library Day Celebration

During the preceding academic year, the institution conducted a Library Day Programme to create awareness regarding the importance of libraries in higher education and professional development.

The programme encouraged students and faculty members to develop regular reading habits, utilise academic resources effectively and understand the importance of libraries in lifelong learning and scientific research.

3. HELINET Hands-On Training Programme

The institution organised a HELINET Hands-On Training Programme for teaching faculty and students to improve awareness and practical understanding of electronic library resources.

The programme focused on accessing scholarly journals, electronic publications, research articles, academic databases and digital reference materials through HELINET resources.

Practical demonstrations helped participants understand literature searching, information retrieval and effective utilisation of electronic academic resources.

4. Library Resources Introduction Programme

A Library Resources Introduction and Orientation Programme was conducted to familiarise students and faculty members with the available library facilities, textbooks, reference volumes, journals and other learning resources.

Participants were introduced to library organisation, classification, book circulation procedures, resource identification and the effective use of the Integrated Library Management System.

The programme aimed to promote independent learning, academic discipline and optimum utilisation of institutional library resources.

5. Remote Access to Digital Library Resources Programme

The institution conducted a Remote Access to Digital Library Resources Awareness Programme to familiarise teachers and students with accessing electronic learning resources beyond the physical library environment.

The programme provided guidance on digital resource navigation, online literature searches, electronic journals, academic information retrieval and the use of available remote-access facilities.

This initiative promoted flexible learning, self-directed study and continuous academic engagement.

6. Outcome of Library Usage Programmes

These programmes strengthened awareness of physical and digital library facilities, improved information-searching skills and encouraged students and teachers to utilise academic resources for teaching, learning, clinical practice and research.

Conclusion

During the preceding academic year, the institution conducted Library Day, HELINET Hands-On Training, Library Resources Introduction and Remote Access to Digital Library Resources programmes, demonstrating its commitment to library user education, digital literacy, academic enrichment and effective utilisation of learning resources.
